Superintendent Director

Dear Class of 2009,

Martin Luther King, Jr. once wrote, "The ultimate measure of a person is not where they stand in moments of comfort and convenience, but where they stand in times of challenge and controversy."

Life is a journey during which we all face challenges and, hopefully, have many moments of comfort. The start of high school is a challenge for most people - it's a time for maturing, looking toward the future, exercising independence. It's a time to step out of the comfort zones of childhood to discover who you are and who you want to become.

Getting an education is only half the challenge . . . the other half is what you do with it. As graduates you have met your first challenge, you earned your high school education. For some, this will not be enough and you will go on to college, graduate school, and beyond. For others, the world of work awaits you. There lays the challenge . . . what are you going to do with your education? The important thing is that you challenge yourself to be successful in whatever you do.

The more you challenge yourself, the more you will realize what you can achieve when you succeed. Each challenge that is successfully met will give you a greater feeling of confidence in your ability and your potential to succeed. That increased confidence and belief in your abilities will enable you to accomplish anything you want.

It can be a bit scary and challenging in the best of times. Yes, we live in tumultuous times and we have witnessed monumental events in the four years here at Greater Lowell. We have watched as the U.S. military fights wars in both Afghanistan and Iraq, a global recession, the election of the first African-American to the Presidency of the United States, as well as the election of the first African-American to the corner office right here in Massachusetts, and the Madoff scandal, which cost thousands of Americans their retirement savings. And who can forget that miraculous landing on the Hudson by Captain Chesley "Sully" Sullenberger.

But it wasn't all so serious. We saw another Red Sox World Series triumph and the rise of the Boston Celtics on route to capturing their 17th World Championship. We witnessed the launch of the new iPhone, Twitter, the rise of The Hills and Heidi and Spencer's on again, off again weddings.

There was one event that my colleagues and I watched over the last four years that you probably haven't seen - your transformation. You changed from the unsure group of freshmen who entered Greater Lowell, to young adults ready to go out and make their way in the world. You have stepped up to the challenges that faced you. You have stayed focused, gaining the tools, skills, and knowledge you will need to begin the next chapter of your life.

Class of 2009, you will travel in many different directions, down many different paths, but remember to enjoy the moments of comfort and convenience, and know you have what it takes to stand tall and proud in the face of challenges and controversy. We are all proud; be proud yourselves.

Good Luck
